DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1 and 3-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hayashi (US 2004/0045398 A1) in view of Sugawara et al. (US 4,938,322).

Regarding claims 1 and 3-14, Hayashi discloses all claimed elements set forth in the figures above and the last office action mailed on 01/15/2008, but Hayashi does not disclose a smooth outer periphery of the rotor extending continuously without interruption, but Sugasawara discloses a damper device (figs. 5a-5d) with a rotor (6) having a smooth outer periphery extending continuously without interruption. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the rotor of Hayashi having a smooth outer periphery extending continuously without interruption as taught by Sugasawara, because a smooth outer periphery of the rotor extending continuously without interruption will provide an improved high torque damper device for producing variable amount of torque which is relatively simple and economical to manufacture and assemble.

Hayashi does not disclose the arc shaped air retention portions being formed by elongated through-bore as claimed, but Sugasawara discloses a damper device (figs. 5a-5d) with a rotor (6) having an arc shaped air retention portions (see figure below) being formed by elongated through-bore (6c). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the disc of Hayashi with the arc shaped air retention portions being formed by elongated through-bore as taught by Sugasawara, because the arc shaped air retention portions being formed by elongated through-bore will accelerate the flow of viscous liquid to ensure a smooth movement of viscous liquid.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 08/05/2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Regarding the applicants remarks on page 7 of the remarks, the primary reference, Hayashi, is qualified as prior art under subsection (a) of section 102; therefore, the rejection of 103(a) is valid and proper.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
